Jobs As Liquor Director, Bank Superintendent Still Open

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 8.—Governor-elect Martin L. Davey today indicated that Joseph H. Scobell will not continue as state liquor director.

"I understand Mr. Scobell has other plans," said the incoming governor, "and therefore I have several other men in mind for the appointment."

Ayers Out, Also
Mr. Davey confirmed the fact that he considers Allan F. Ayers definitely out insofar as his acceptance of the proffered state superintendency of banks is concerned.

"In view of Mr. Ayers' definite declination it now becomes necessary for me to start all over to look for a likely man for the appointment," the governor-elect said.

"It's going to be a tough job to find a man who doesn't owe anybody any money," he commented.

Mr. Davey said he would return to Washington Thursday to see Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, and department of justice officials to get some ideas and suggestions to help him organize a state department of public safety "that will really be an agency of law enforcement, entirely free from politics."

A revision of policies in connection with operation of the state liquor control department is uppermost in the mind of the governor-elect, he indicated.

"We've got to do something about the bootlegger in Ohio who still flourishes," said Mr. Davey.

"There must be inaugurated in the state liquor department a strict policy of first selling nothing but good liquor and secondly to sell it at a price that people can afford to pay."

Will Control Prices
"Either the tax or the profits from liquor must be eliminated if we are to put the bootlegger out of business. And this we intend to do directly through the department's ability to control its own prices."

Mr. Davey said that while he is in Washington he may again confer with Ohio congressmen about revision of the beer tax to bring back, if possible, the five-cent glass of beer.

Sheriff Ballantine Ill At Home Here

Sheriff Frank Ballantine is confined to his home here with a bad attack of grip. He returned to Salem immediately after the grand jury was sworn in Monday.

Also confined to their homes because of illness are Judge W. F. Lones of Wellsville and County Commissioner Austin I. Getz of Perry township. Prosecuting Attorney George L. Lafferty, who had been confined to his home with a bad cold, was able to conduct the grand jury preliminaries yesterday.

$11,310 for Schools--$7,334 for City

ESTIMATED YIELDS, UNTIL JUNE 30, FROM SALES TAX, BASED ON TAX COMMISSION FIGURES

A total of approximately $11,310, or enough to pay expenses for a single month, will be available to Salem's public schools from the new three per cent tax collections for the period ending June 30, 1935.

Hailed as the answer to all financial problems of the state, school and municipal, the new tax on retail sales is not going to be as productive of revenue as the general opinion seems to hold it is, in the view of educators and municipal authorities.

Local school authorities have done some "readin', writin' and 'rithmetic" since estimates became available on sales tax collections and the best total they can achieve in the way of income for Salem schools is approximately $11,310, which, as was pointed out above, is hardly more than enough to run the public school system for a single month.

The estimates of the sales tax yield, school officials point out, are based on the Ohio Tax commission's original estimates that a three per cent bracketed sales tax, without exemptions, would yield $60,000,000 annually.

The estimated gross yield from Feb. 1 to June 30, 1935, is placed at $24,000.

Then come deductions, as follows: For old age pensions, $6,000,000; poor relief, the same amount, and both of these appropriations are for the first half of 1935, no appropriation having been made to cover needs for the last half of the year; one-half of the appropriation for poor relief bond service, $2,000,000; administration and rotating fund, $1,025,000. The deductions total $15,025,000.

The net receipts for schools and municipalities then are figured at $8,975,000 for the first six months. The net receipts are to be divided, 60 per cent to schools and 40 per cent to municipalities.

Thus, the schools' share, based on these figures, would be $5,385,000, and, based on the rate per pupil in average daily attendance, which is $4.35, the total for the Salem city school district would be $11,310.

If the municipality, then, is to receive 40 per cent, the city would receive until June 30, a total of approximately $7,334, based on an estimated total yield of $60,000,000 annually.

GIRL ATHLETES FORM PRO TEAM

Open Season Wednesday; Strong Schedule Is Lined Up

Salem's basketball season will be provided with new thrills as the girls' professional team, playing under the name of Salem Pennzils, gets into action this week.

Tom French, former Denison university star, as coach and manager of the team, has assembled outstanding girl players of Salem and the district to meet some of the best teams in the country.

Opening Game Wednesday
The opening game will be played against the Warren girls at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Memorial building. Boys rules will be used.

Backed by Harvey Egle, manager of the Pennzils company, this team has been practicing twice a week for the last six weeks and is in fine condition for the opening game. The girls will appear in striking uniforms, donated by Salem merchants.

French has picked outstanding players to form his 1935 team and before the season is over he expects them to develop into a flashy outfit. Among the girls are Mary Socash and Jean Parker of Youngstown; Fritz Hanscom, former Riggs player of Akron; Margaret Creed, former MacKenzie player of Youngstown; Melba Barnes, Bezie Mileusnic, Hazel Roessler, Mary Weigand, Henrietta Burt and Margaret Dewan, all of Salem.

Emergency Schools Provide Activities for 625 in County

Ambitious Men and Women Turn Spare Time Into Periods of Usefulness Through Class Work

Six hundred and twenty-five persons are turning their spare time into periods of usefulness in Columbiana county emergency school class projects, it was revealed today by Superintendent Lee D. Kepner, county chairman of the emergency schools and County Supervisor H. W. Lauterbach.

Thirty-eight classes or groups, led by 39 teachers, are maintained. The fields covered by the classes include vocational training, literacy, general academic subjects, health, art, handicraft, agricultural economics, nursery schools and radio.

Attendance Good
Class attendance has been exceedingly good, the county leaders report, in spite of other evening attractions. The results in some instances were outstanding. Only recently the combined classes of Miss Ethel Peterson of East Liverpool gave an impressive sacred concert before a crowd of 400.

Other persons wishing to enroll in these or the radio courses may do so through the superintendents of schools in the various county towns and cities. There is no charge for enrollment.

Activities of the emergency school in Salem include pottery, commercial art, art metal work, and home art, taught by Adelaide Dyball; health and recreation, taught by Raphael Reasbeck and George Easley; chemistry, trigonometry and slide rule instructions, by H. W. Lauterbach; psychology, by Charles Linton, and elementary subjects, Vera Matthews.

Other classes about the county include:
At Columbiana: Woodworking, Isalah Mowen.
At East Liverpool: English (two groups), French (two groups), Margaret Blake; sculpture and pottery, Helen Bailey; vocal and choral music (two groups), Ethel Peterson; elementary subjects for colored people, Mary Payne.
At East Palestine: Health and

Pottery Increase For 1935 Is Seen

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 8.—With predictions that the new year will witness a 25 per cent increase in business over 1934, the Associated Glass and Pottery Manufacturers were in the midst of their annual exhibit here today.

Sales in 1934, said J. M. Hammer, manager, probably will exceed the 1933 total of $3,000,000.

Floor Completed In Court Room No. 2

LISBON, Jan. 8.—Last floor covering was laid in common pleas court room No. 2 Monday afternoon. Floor covering has been received here for the office of Judge W. F. Lones, located in the rear of the court room, also for the witness room and the jury room. The covering will be laid in the last three rooms within two weeks, it is believed by Construction Supt. Jack Ogden.

About 50 workers are being employed on this PERA project now, a decrease of 30 from the number of a week ago.

Final concrete floor was poured in one room in the rear of No. 2 court room Monday, and another room was to be poured today. When the concrete is dry, carpenters will begin work.

Build New Dam

GALLIPOLIS, O., Jan. 8.—Giving employment to 550 men for three years, construction of a high roller type dam, estimated to cost the government $3,000,000 will be started in the Ohio river at Eureka, nine miles below here, within a few days.

Among speakers were the Rev. Messrs. William J. Single, Dover; F. W. Loose, Lorain; H. J. Bouman, Canton; Arthur Schroder, Elyria; Robert Borchert, missionary to the deaf mutes in Northern Ohio; H. C. Bauer, Cleveland; H. M. Hoge, Valley City, and George Kuehler, Cleveland.

POINTS FINGER AT BRUNO

"Glared at Me As If He Saw Ghost!" Man,
87, Tells Court

By WILLIAM A. KINNEY.
(Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press.)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—An aged former neighbor of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh pointed a palsied finger at the accused Bruno Richard Hauptmann today and declared he saw him near the Lindbergh home on the day Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was stolen from his crib and slain.

The aged witness, Amandus Hochmuth, 87, positively identified Hauptmann as a man in a dirty green automobile who passed his home on March 1, 1932, turned into the Lindbergh road and "glared at me as if he saw a ghost!"

Lights Go Out
The melodramatic surprise—heightened by the extinguishing of the courtroom light just as the old man first pointed accusingly at Hauptmann—was sandwiched between two other highlights of the morning session.

The state failed in its second attempt to get the ladder, down which it contends the baby was carried to its death, into evidence, and the defense pursued a vigorous attack upon the efficiency of the New Jersey police after two state troopers testified they could find no fingerprints in the Lindbergh nursery, on the ladder or on the ransom note which Lindbergh found on the nursery window sill.

The defense successfully blocked the ladder from evidence on the ground that it had not been properly identified.

Hochmuth, who turned out to be the mysterious old man who paced the jail in front of Hauptmann's cell several weeks ago, electrified the packed court when he gave his testimony. And there was a gasp when he stepped down from the stand and gingerly touched the Bronx carpenter with his hand.

Hauptmann rolled his head negatively back and forth.

The old man testified he was standing on the porch of his home in the forenoon on March 1, 1932. His home, he explained, was on the main highway intersection with the lane that runs to the Lindbergh place in Hopewell.

"Glared at Me"
"Well, he said, 'I saw a car coming around the corner, pretty good speed, and I expected it to turn over on the ditch. And as the car was about 25—I should judge about 25 feet away from me, the man in there looked out of the window like this—'"

Cincinnati Has New Deal For Taxpayers

CINCINNATI, Jan. 8.—Cincinnati, which has achieved wide recognition as a "model" of good government, today had pointed the way toward a "new deal" for its taxpayers, with announcement that the levy rate on 1934 taxes would be 16.85 mills, or close to five mills on the dollar under the 1933 rate of 21.44.

This, despite a recent order restoring in full, salary cuts to employees receiving $1,500 or less annually, and partial restorations to those in higher brackets.

High on the list of factors enabling the county budget commission to arrive at the reduced figure, were anticipated revenues from Ohio's sales tax, and from the boost from 5 to 6 per cent on intangibles, members of the commission said.

Want A King

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 8.—See where Mussolini and Foreign Minister Laval have decided to let Austria have a king? You know I didn't know this till I was in Vienna last fall, but Austria really wants a king, can you imagine that?

The nearest we can come to understanding that, is an American girl wanting a man with a title.

It's a musical city, cafes, and a lot of bright-colored uniforms, and a king and some waiters is about all they want. So France and Italy are going to give 'em Archduke Otto; you would wonder what they have to do with it.

Well, that's Europe for you, Austria and Hungary's business is everybody's business. These Hapsburgs have gummed up about all of Europe.

Yours,

NOT FORGETTING COLUMBUS

Obscurity is the fate of state legislatures when things are happening in Washington. Almost unnoticed Monday was the convening of the general assembly in Columbus.

The first day's session produced little of interest, other than final settlement of the issue of leadership in the lower house. Two Republican members, by voting against their party, gave the speakership to J. Freer Bittinger, Ashland Democrat. Mr. Bittinger received 69 votes. Arthur Hamilton of Lebanon, Republican candidate, was given 66 votes. Thus, the Democratic party is made responsible for both houses of the assembly as well as the governorship. Republicans, with a nominal majority in the house of representatives, will be a minority as far as organization of committees and responsibility for legislation are concerned.

Such things, however, are only minor details in the unfolding history of the 90th general assembly. This assembly has the task of reconstructing several important sections of state government, chiefly taxation and banks. It will be judged by its efforts in these fields. The 89th general assembly, given the task of meeting an emergency, naturally was judged by its performance of that duty. By enacting a state sales tax, the 89th assembly left the 90th in a position to begin reconstruction without the disruption which always accompanies an emergency faced at the outset of a legislative session.

A sales tax is not going to be Ohio's way of rebuilding its tax structure. It is a good tax for an emergency. It could be made a good tax for the federal government to administer, if sources of taxes were to be divided between the states and the federal government. For Ohio, however, it is of limited usefulness—an emergency tax. If this belief be made clear to state representatives and senators beforehand, much trouble may be averted when they come to deal with taxation.

Banking legislation to correct practices which directly and indirectly led to many bank failures during the depression has lagged far behind the need for it. The federal government, which came to the rescue of all banks when they got into trouble, has been permitted to create the impression it is going to be permanent master of their destinies. If there are going to continue to be state banks, there must be laws which will assure depositors that state banks are going to be administered better than they were in the previous decade.

Responsibilities like these should fill members of the 90th general assembly and Martin L. Davey, the new governor, with a sense of responsibility active enough to influence all their actions. Each new assembly and each new administration is expected to be better than the last. Ohio would be fortunate if events in Columbus the next two years were to vindicate its expectancy. There is need for exceeding excellence to meet the many tasks of government in these times.

ESCAPE FROM DISASTER

Another steamship in the passenger trade between the United States and Cuba has run into bad luck. Unlike the Morro Castle incident last autumn, the bad luck this time affects only the owners. Some will be inclined to think it strange the owners should be the same in both cases, incidentally.

The Havana, Ward line ship bound from New York to Cuba, ran aground on a coral reef off Jupiter, Fla., early Sunday morning. The accident was not made known for approximately three hours, when an SOS was sent out. Remembering the Morro Castle disaster, other ships in the vicinity responded quickly.

Because there apparently was no untoward incident in the work of saving the Havana's passengers and crew, the public's interest in the story naturally is not intense. An escape from disaster may be thrilling to the persons who might have been the victims of tragedy. But it is of only passing concern to people at large.

Yet, in the Havana's situation, aground on a coral reef miles off its regular course, there were all the elements of a major sea tragedy. One wonders in trying to be perfectly fair whether good luck or efficiency was responsible for checking so quickly the development of a situation which easily might have horrified the world instead of merely getting its passing attention for a few hours.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Cole Porter's bounce across the social horizons has created a real Horatio Alger type on the Gold Coast. He is the personification of the small town boy who became an international dilettante. A supercilious gazer at the amusing punctilios of the haute monde.

He etches them into his musical comedy lyrics as Peter Arno has travestied the white-mustached stuffed shirts of the club lounges. Born of middle class respectable parents in Peru, Indiana, he was up to the time he graduated from Yale no different from the back country's usual output.

Yet since graduation his path has probably been the most scintillating of any American of his generation. He seems to have been born not only with a silver spoon but with a flock of gold horse-shoes ringing his neck. Finding New York a bit gauche, he settled in Paris.

There he married a lady of similar tastes and a fortune. But Porter had no need of the fortune. His toe-tickling lyrics and music have made vast sums in all world capitals. He dashes them off in unbelievably short time without correction. And then travels in state over the civilized world.

Hell's Kitchen has two movie idols—Jimmy Cagney and George Raft. They represent on the screen the dream of every corner loafer. To be adored by the ladies and swing a wicked right. A walk through the district in the evening or a survey of the pool halls will reveal many imitators indulging the Cagney swagger and striving for Raft's patent leathered elegance.

A most persistent story among antique dealers concerns the browsing collector who saw a cat lapping from what appeared a valuable saucer. He openly admired the cat and offered to buy it for $20. The sale was made. About to leave, with the cat under his arm, he observed: "A cat is lonesome without some old association. I'll give you a dollar for that saucer." The dealer wouldn't sell, and at a $100 offer exclaimed: "You couldn't buy it for $1,000, because already from that saucer I have sold five thousand cats."

Leo Newman is dean of the "specs"—the Rialto name for the men who run the theatrical ticket agencies. He is a white-haired veteran of a thousand and one first nights whose memories go back to Booth. He was a confidant of Charles Dillingham, Erlanger and many old timers. His estimate of a play's potentiality for Broadway's production is almost unerring. An uneducated fellow, he is guided not by critical authority but by "showman sense." Ticket agency men learn theatre value by bitter experience. If their judgment fails, they pay heavily.

New York hotels, almost 100 percent insolvent, are still wallowing in financial slack. Although business has picked up, in some instances 40 percent, and repeal adds another large revenue, the profits have been eaten up by increasing costs in operating. Little hope is held for absorption of the over-supply for the next five years. Some estimate there are more than 20 hotels of a large size too many. But even a more stupendous industrial tragedy was averted. The Wall Street crash delayed building of 10 more staggering inns that were already on blueprints.

The Rainbow Room, sky high in Rockefeller Center, has been also tops in swank night spots. That is, up to the moment of going to press. Such popularity is always ephemeral. The room has brought out the shiniest high hats and the glossiest in sables. For out-of-townners it has become something "to refer to" when they get home and begin talking big. The night it was there a melancholy mood singer was hushing to a twanging guitar. Several couples sat stony-eyed, enraptured. I could only beat a devil's tattoo on the chair arm and wonder how much the tax on the check. Sacre tonnerre, what a thing to get old!

A Review of the Day's News

—By Arthur Brisbane—

IN HIS NEW White House offices, President Roosevelt is at work on a "social security program," which will include unemployment insurance and old age pensions. The idea is to let pay-rolls contribute to the cost of insurance and pensions. This might work well with normal payrolls.

You hope that the President, in his wisdom, will include in any "security" program, security for the nation, in addition to security for individuals, old or out of a job.

Unemployment insurance and old age pensions would do little good if a few thousand planes came flying from Europe or Asia to bomb our cities and spray them with poison gas. If they came now, they could do exactly as they pleased. We have no way of interfering with them.

ON THE ISLAND of Ceylon, more than 250,000 suffer from malaria that kills thousands, including doctors, children and women. Ninety per cent of the population in some localities have been affected by the germ that mosquitoes plant in the blood of victims.

After human beings tire of killing each other in war they will find more interesting and useful wars against the mosquito, supposed to have destroyed the power of ancient Rome, and the tree-toe fly that makes vast territories in Africa uninhabitable.

CONGRESSMAN TREADWAY, of Massachusetts, asks Congress to tax securities now tax free, an important step in the direction of common sense. Mr. Treadway says 50 thousand million dollars of securities exist that pay not a cent to government, that spends considerable money to protect them, and their owners.

A doctor, business man, or other, earning a moderate income, using up his life in the process, must pay taxes on what he gets, but 50 billions of money that pay interest without labor, are not taxed at all. Does it not seem to President Roosevelt that those 50 billions represent some of the "over-privileged," referred to in his important address to Congress.

TO READ that Harry McCracken, 75-year-old retired cattle puncher, jumped up when a bandit told him to sit still, and "drilled" the bandit through the shoulder is mildly interesting. It is more interesting to read that it happened in a "suburban liquor store," of Colorado, where McCracken spends his time sitting by the stove "whittling."

To sit whittling by a liquor store seems a strange occupation for one 75 years old, who knows that time is whittling away his few remaining days.

Now the farmer sows his seeds. Now he stands and takes his ease. Stamps his foot and claps his hands.

And turns around to view the land. You sate that as a child, and when it was written, the farmer's pride was in freedom to stamp his foot or clap his hands as he liked, even if he got only 10 cents a bushel for his corn.

Now, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will tell the farmer when to stamp his foot, when to clap his hands, when to turn around, when to stop doing anything.

THE AAA asks Congress for complete authority over all crops, all farm activities and for 40 to 60 millions to move farmers from poor farms to better farms.

It is all benevolently planned, but many a farmer would prefer to stamp his foot and clap his hands in the old independent way.

Try the classified—a gold mine of value.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

Have a Hobby. It Adds Years to Life

A few days ago I listened to the animated conversation of two friends of mine who are interested in collecting stamps. Both these men are well-to-do, as well-to-do do indeed, that neither is in any particular business. They are so situated that the lure of business or profession has no attraction for them.

One who engages in the collection of stamps is known as a "philatelist."

This is a big word and comes from the Greek, meaning "loving exemption from taxation." This is rather amusing, because the rich are always accused of seeking to dodge taxation. If any philatelist friends will pardon the attempt at a joke, I will say they are well named!

Danger of "Retirement"

Men "retire" from business because they have made their "pile," or because they have tired of money making or of the demands of professional life. They imagine they are to enjoy ease and they make all sorts of plans for the long anticipated "vacation."

As a matter of fact they become bored most speedily and are apt to yearn for the old activities. They suffer from a form of "homesickness" and in a considerable percentage of cases, die within a short time.

Years ago I made note of the effects of "retirement" upon a half dozen prominent business men. Every one died within a year of withdrawal from active life.

Stimulation of Interest

We need the stimulation of competition and the urge of a regular calling, no matter what that calling may be. If the heart is to beat regularly and strongly, there must be mental and physical activity. Without such action of the heart, the organs do not function. The kidneys, liver, stomach, intestines and the brain itself must have an abundance of blood or their necessary action slows up or fails.

The reason why doctors prescribe walking, swimming, horseback riding, travel, and other forms of change from the usual daily program, is because it is necessary to improve the circulation. When that happens the whole body is put into good working condition.

Value of a Hobby

Many persons who are engaged in sedentary occupations are well as can be. Their cheeks and lips are pink, their hands and feet warm, and they glow with health. This is because they love their work. They get pleasantly excited over it. The heart's action is stimulated by the emotions.

So it is that any agreeable and mind absorbing game will cause the heart to beat faster. You see, therefore, what a blessing to my two friends is the intense interest they have in collecting stamps. They can get as excited over the prospect of obtaining a glimpse of a rare stamp as a child does over the thought of going to the circus.

It is a good thing to have an avocation—something outside the dull monotony of every day life. It will add years to your life.

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER XXXVIII

"Sad Exile was written down in Tahiti. Did you know that?"

"I thought the author must have been there at least."

"Boris lived there three years. He has a native wife down there, or did have, and a child or two. I believe. He was a painter, you know, in the first place; then he tried writing art criticism, but he got pretty well fed up with civilization as it's known in New York and went off to the South Seas. That's how I happened to meet him. I was there in Papeete a couple of months and I hadn't been around the cafes two days when everybody said Boris Warren was the man I ought to meet. Lots of painters, writers and charmingly strange fellows down there, you know. They go down in the first place, most of them, like Boris, to look for cleanliness, honesty and simplicity. They expect to find the Polynesians somewhat as they were in the days of Loti or Melville and then find them wearing cotton print, intermarrying with the Chinese, jabbering French, riding around to whoopee parties in old American flippers and going to movies."

Harrow smiled at Kay's astonishment. "Well," he admitted, "that may not be a comprehensive and altogether fair picture, but it gives you an idea of the changes that are taking place down there, especially in a cosmopolitan cross-section of the South Seas like Papeete."

"Boris had gone a bit batty on the subject of Gauguin, the French painter who fled down there and died on his way to fame. That explains the play, 'Sad Exile,' if you recall."

"He must be an interesting man," Kay said. "What's he like? How old is he?"

"Boris?" Harrow raised a dark eyebrow reflectively. "I'd say he was about thirty—maybe two or three years older, no more. He's big as a horse, and blond as a Viking, and some of the time he flourishes a fierce yellow beard. He is eccentric enough, but he has real talent; sometimes I've thought more than that, but it's hard to tell. He's a strange, futile soul. Has an interesting background, too. Mother was a Russian and his father an Englishman. He was born in Manchuria, in Harbin. Then they lived in Shanghai, London, Paris, and finally New Orleans. His mother died when he was just a youngster and when his father died in New Orleans the kid didn't have a relative left that he knew anything about, but fortunately his father had left him a small trust fund and he was able to go to school as long as he wanted. He went to Tulane in New Orleans, then Oxford, then the Sorbonne and over in Paris he started studying art. Quite a lad, Boris! And quite a battle I'm going to have to win his play down into Florida and get a good title for it without offending his artistic sensibilities."

"Where is he now? In the South Seas?"

"Oh, no," Harrow said, laughing a little. "He left there five years ago and he's tried Majorca, Taos, Bali and Newfoundland since then. The Newfoundland trip explains this play of his. He went up there to find himself and carried along his paints and his typewriter—also a second wife. I've often wondered how much of his play is autobiography. It's about a painter with a flair for philosophy and a worm of some sort in his soul who seeks whatever he's looking for in the woods up there by the north Atlantic. He meets a girl up there, the wife of some sort of fisherman who's a hard-boiled, pretty cruel customer. In the end the painter takes to the sea with the fisherman's wife and his own wife hies back to the city lights. The fisherman manages to get himself killed trying to take his spleen out on the lovers."

"And what part am I to play?" Kay asked timidly. She could not believe that all this—Boris Warren, the play of the painter and the fisherman's wife—could, after all, have anything to do with her.

"The fisherman's wife," Harrow said. "And I think you're going to be able to handle it just the way Boris intended. Of course, before we go through, Boris' fisherman may be a Florida fisherman or a Miami rum-runner. But the play will remain essentially the same."

Kay sat back and marvelled at this prospect, and at this strange man beside her who could so control the destinies of playwrights, their characters and the actors and actresses who portrayed them. Below her, Georgia looked like a distant jig-saw puzzle.

When they arrived in New York one of Harrow's cars, a sleek blue limousine, was waiting for them at the airport.

"Where now?" Pete asked.

"We'll go out to my place on Long Island," Harrow explained. "Better than the city. We all need to rest and collect our wits for a day or two and that's the place to do it. I've invited Boris to come out and stay with us."

And in a few minutes they were speeding smoothly over a wide concrete road. The ground was strewn with fallen leaves and there was a snap in the air that was a sudden change from Florida. This then, Kay thought, is New York. I'm here.

Earl Harrow's Long Island home was more luxurious than anything Kay had known in Florida. It was a rambling, mellow looking structure with a note of what seemed genuine antiquity—English, she presumed—and the house and the grounds both had a distinctly friendly, masculine air about them, nothing new, cheap or showy. Inside, the house was a surprise. The main room extended up two floors with a great beamed ceiling and a huge fireplace as in a feudal stronghold. Yet in the decorations and the furnishings no definite trend had been followed, though everything seemed to have a distinct, unquestionable place in its surroundings. There were paintings, tapestries, pieces of sculpture, fine old furniture, that Harrow had collected the world over, and if he had chosen them in a lot, Kay thought, he could not have done better. And there were books, thousands of books, it seemed, ranked in great tall open cases, many with fine old bindings, but all looking as if they had been opened and the pages at least cut. All this was a new side of Earl Harrow for her, one she admired greatly.

She was made comfortable in a huge room with an old canopied bed, the first she ever had seen except in a picture, and for a while she was too pleased and excited to do more than inspect her new surroundings. She was tired, though, and that night she went to bed reading a New York paper. She began to doze over a Broadway column in which she found this item:

"Earl Harrow, who put those baddies in their place in Florida, is due today by plane. He's plotting a new show by Boris Warren."

It was not until breakfast the next morning that she remembered Spike Winch had been busy hunting and picking with the forefinger of each hand on his battered portable typewriter. He must have let the news out.

Kay had gone to her room not long after breakfast when a maid announced that Mr. Harrow wished to see her in the library. She went down quickly and found a little group waiting. Harrow was there, Pete, and Spike and two strangers, one of them a dark, fierce-beaked little man with black-rimmed glasses and a beret which he removed only as she entered, revealing a head as bald and shining as a billiard ball, the other obviously was Boris Warren, the playwright. Kay's eyes fastened upon him at once, and as the introductions were made—the little man was Ben Leschin, the director—she studied Warren's unusual face.

It was a long, smooth skinned face—Warren was wearing now a fierce, down-curved Tartar mustache rather than one of his occasional beards—with large, sad eyes that looked alternately piercing black or luminous blue according to the light. His hair was thick and blond and naturally wavy and anything about, but fortunately his father had left him a small trust fund and he was able to go to school as long as he wanted. He went to Tulane in New Orleans, then Oxford, then the Sorbonne and over in Paris he started studying art. Quite a lad, Boris! And quite a battle I'm going to have to win his play down into Florida and get a good title for it without offending his artistic sensibilities."

Everything about Boris Warren's appearance was unusual. His frame was huge, though in good proportion, and his clothing was a shock. He wore a pair of baggy, almost threadbare gray flannel trousers with a wide black belt and a black turtle-neck sweater, tucked into the trousers. For shoes he had some sort of brown leather sandals laced with thongs.

His voice as he spoke to Kay was deep and resonant, yet not in the least aggressive; it was, indeed, the voice of a very shy, sad young man. When he had spoken he dropped back to his chair and replaced in his mouth a stubby, brown-stained clay pipe.

Harrow assumed the role of master-of-ceremonies. He turned from one to another as he outlined the plans.

"Boris had agreed, Kay, to shift the locale of the play, providing he is allowed time to do it as he feels it should be done."

Warren nodded solemnly, puffing at his clay pipe, his long legs crossed.

"Well, Warren," Harrow said, "and you, Ben, here's Miss Owen. Don't worry about her. I've seen her. She has presence, needs only a little work with her voice, and can read lines as they were meant to be read. The rest will come with a little training which is in your capable hands, Ben."

Leschin, who was lighting a cigarette in a white ivory holder, bared his long, wolfish teeth in what was meant to be a smile of assent. The man frightened Kay a little, but she remembered the glowing praise of him she had read in various theatrical publications, and supposed she eventually would find the real man behind the strange, forbidding exterior.

"Warren, off-hand, what do you think of Miss Owen as a type? Is she anything like the girl you had in mind?"

"There was a long pause that was awkward for Kay, and Warren said, rumbly, 'Amazingly.'"

Kay wanted to sigh with relief. After several matters of preliminary business had been discussed, Kay found herself alone with Boris Warren.

"I'm certainly relieved," she said, "to learn that I'm the least bit like the girl you had in mind, Mr. Warren. And I can't wait until I see your play. They haven't shown me a line of it yet, but I know it must be wonderful."

"You know that, do you?" Warren said, enigmatically. "Why?"

Kay had no answer. Again the silence rose between them, awkward, full of subtle implications that she tried unsuccessfully to understand.

"It is close," Warren said finally. "Would you like to walk?"

"I'd love to. I haven't been out of the house."

They went out together and walked down to the water.

"This is different to you? After Florida?"

"Very," Kay said. "I never was in New York before."

"New York I despise, and then again I am drawn to it irresistibly. Therefore I tell myself I am really in love with the city."

"That's rather a strange way of being in love. I mean by despising the thing you feel you love."

"That is love," Warren observed, and was quiet again as they strolled in.

"The young chap—Ryan! You're engaged to him?" he asked later.

"We're the best of friends," Kay answered shyly.

"So" it was as if he understood the entire situation; to Kay it was uncanny.

"If your play is anything as good as 'Sad Exile,' I'm going to love it," Kay said.

"Sad Exile?" Warren raised a thick blond eyebrow. "But you said you never had been in New York before?"

"I read it."

"You read it?" He seemed amazed. "In Florida?"

"Yes, I read all the plays I can get. I've always done it. And I thought 'Sad Exile' was wonderful. It left me feeling haunted."

"Gauguin," Warren said, "left me feeling haunted. Perhaps that explains it." He shook his head as if in sad reminiscence.

When Warren and Leschin had gone, Pete drew Kay aside. "Well," he asked, grinning, "what do you think?"

"I was never so thrilled in my life!"

"Couple of strange ducks, that pair, Warren and Leschin."

"But they're fascinating."

"So I noticed, Warren, at least."

"You're not getting jealous of him already?" Kay asked lightly.

"I don't know," Pete said honestly. "But, believe me, I surely could without much trying."

"Don't bother, though."

"Say—after the way those big funny eyes of his stayed on you? That bird's got a look in his eye that doesn't take too much interpreting."

Harrow came in.

"Well, in a day or two, when you've had a rest, you and Ben Leschin will start to work," he said. "I'm going to keep you right out here for a while until we're ready to let you be seen. And, Pete, Monday you'll start work at the show on Seventh avenue. I've a nice spot for you there."

The day passed swiftly without further event until that evening when Kay turned again to the Broadway columns. Once more she saw the name Earl Harrow, and read:

"... Those baddies are plenty hot now that Earl Harrow is back in town and what big racketeer is hatching more trouble?"

Harrow came upon Kay and saw her reading the item.

"Sad," he admitted, "but true." (To Be Continued)

This photo shows inspectors examining the electric rail switch near Dundas, Ont., which has been held responsible for the tragic railroad wreck in which 15 persons were killed and 30 injured. Investigators said the switch failed to close after an excursion train had pulled into a siding, and a Chicago-Montreal flyer ran through it, crashing into the rear of the holiday train.

Brighten up with ALL-BRAN!

You've had days when you've felt discouraged and low. Nothing seemed to go right. Frequently these dreary days can be traced to common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in your meals.

This ailment may cause headaches and loss of energy. Correct it by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory research shows Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and foodiron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the fiber in fruits and vegetables. It is gentle—and often more effective. Isn't this natural food better than taking patent medicines—often harmful?

Two tablespoons of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Brighten days with ALL-BRAN! Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

SM. 11 BODICE FULLNESS TO FLATTER THE MATRON

Pattern 2121

Every detail of this youthful and charming afternoon frock was designed with an eye to flattering the more matronly figure. The soft gathers beneath the shoulders, both back and front of the bodice are not only fashionable but they provide becoming fullness as well—the rippling double-jabot effect emphasizes the nice V line of the neck—and the way the panel of the skirt comes up to a neat little point above the waist will do wonders for the woman who is large through the hips. Canton crepe, in a dark blue—and according to latest reports, blue is to be particularly smart this spring—would be a lovely choice for the fabric with a bit of pastel blue or cream lace for vestee.

Pattern 2121 is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric and 1/2 yard 36 inch lace. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SUPREME COURT HITS NEW DEAL

Holds That Oil Control Law Is Unconstitutional

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The New Deal, deprived of a portion of NIRA which the supreme court tossed out of the window as unconstitutional, still strove today to keep the federal lid on "hot oil".

At the same time, the belief was expressed on Capitol Hill that the high tribunal's act in scrapping an oil control provision in the national industrial recovery act spelled the doom of some other new deal legislation.

Senator Adams (D. Colo.) said some of the laws behind the government's agricultural program contained provisions similar to the oil control features which the supreme court killed on the ground congress had delegated too much law-making power to the president.

Ickes Stands By Code

The section scrapped by an 8 to 1 decision was 9 (C) under which the government has been undertaking to bar from interstate commerce oil produced in excess of quotas fixed by state agencies. This petroleum is known as "hot oil".

Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, noted that the decision "did not rule on the oil code". Embodied in other parts of NIRA.

"We still have that code and will continue to operate," he declared. "We will attempt to regulate hot oil with every resource we have."

While some oil leaders in the great east Texas field expressed fear the $1-a-barrel price structure would collapse under a flow of illegal oil and strove to prevent a return of "Uncle Sam" in competition, one school of thought in New York contended the code and state regulation combined would handle the situation.

Moves to present new legislation remedying that on which the high court turned thumbs down were already under way.

The house will be a modern, two-story, owned and operated by Jan Ryan Jr. The house is expected to be done March 1, although it will not be opened until May 1.

The structure will replace the house on the old David Strohecker farm on the Leetonia road which is now a state highway and is the most direct route between Colum-biana and Valley Lake. The club house will be a modern two-story frame structure, 30 by 50 feet and will contain 11 rooms. Among these will be a card room, lounge, and a large dining room, 25 by 30 feet, with a huge stone fireplace in one end. There will be a kitchen, shower rooms, lockers, office, etc.

The golf course will remain a nine-hole one, but has been enlarged by 25 acres, making the course cover 51 acres of land. The longest hole will now be 500 yards.
Mr. Ryan expects to organize a golf club similar to that in past years. In the house, they will be prepared to serve club dinners, private parties and light lunches.
For the use of picnickers, there will be an outside oven and tables. Mr.

course in 1930, and in 1931 opened a larger course, which has been added to each year since.

Bits of News From
The World Of Athletics

If his past performances have any bearing on his future at Harvard, Dick Harlow's Crimson team should win an average of six out of eight games every season and go undefeated every five years or so.

A study of the new Harvard coach's record at Penn State, Colgate and Western Maryland revealed that his teams have won 119 out of 168 games, lost 28 and tied 11.

The ideal opponent for a Harlow-coached team appears to be Gettysburg, which has bowed before his players eight times. On the other hand, Pittsburgh should be kept off the schedule for the Panthers have trounced Harlow's forces every time they met, five times in all.

His 19 teams, representing three different colleges, have piled up a total of 3,886 points, an average of 23 a game, and have had 956 points scored against them, less than a touchdown a game.

Five of Harlow's teams have enjoyed undefeated seasons, but only two of them, his 1912 Penn State and his 1929 Western Maryland, escaped ties.

"I'll get my lawyers!" Jimmy Johnston was shouting that around Madison Square Garden today as Nate Lewis and Jim Mullen, partners of a Chicago fight promoting combine, were browsing around Gotham in quest of opponents for Max Baer for five ten-round exhibitions.

Steve Hamas, Art Lasky and Baer himself are bound under garden contracts, matchmaker Johnston insists.

"The agreements we have with Baer, Schmeling and Lasky are good all over the world," roared Johnston. "They'll have to do a lot of fighting in the courts before they can get into the ring. I'll get my lawyers."

Joe Louis, the sensational Detroit Negro heavyweight who along with Hamas, Lasky, Primo Carnera and Max Schmeling are being sought by Lewis and Mullen for exhibition champions, is acknowledged by Johnston as having plenty on the ball.

That's the only thing he and the invading promoters agree on.

(By Associated Press)

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 8.—Tippy Dye who didn't let the strain of extra periods interfere with his work, scored two field goals in the final two minutes of an overtime period here last night, enabling Ohio State to defeat Michigan 33 to 30.

TENNIS STARS IN MIAMI MEET

Sidney Wood Jr. Experiments With Grip Variations

(By Associated Press)

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 8.—Preparing for the Davis cup season by ironing out unevenness in his game, Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, is experimenting with grip variations during play in the Miami Biltmore tennis tournament.

The United States' number two ace, who faced E. J. Harbette of Miami in today's third round match, is endeavoring to improve his offensive game by use of the American grip in which the racket becomes a prolongation of the arm.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Professional tennis opens its 1935 season tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden with its disciples eagerly awaiting the renewal of rivalry between Bill Tilden and George Martin Lot, Jr.

The season's inaugural marks the debut as a commercial artist of Lot and his national championship and Davis cup doubles partner, Long Lester Roli Stoefer of Los Angeles. They will team for a doubles engagement with Tilden and Ellsworth Vines.

While considerable interest is being attached to the tandem tussle, the main attraction appears to be the Tilden-Lot singles match, marking the first time in five years the two have opposed each other.

action, as exemplified in the brilliant defensive courtwork of France's Rene La Coe. The New Yorker appears to be obtaining a more forceful delivery by altering this.

Bell to Play Courts

Berkeley Bell, also of New York, the United States' number seven, who, like Wood, found no difficulty eliminating first and second round opponents, had sterner competition today. He played Malon Courts of Atlanta, co-holder of the southern doubles title.

The long foreign seeded player, Canada's cup star, Marcel Rainville, was opposed by Arthur Hendrix of Lakeland, Fla., former state singles champion. Bryan M. Grant, Jr., of Atlanta, other co-holder of the southern doubles championship, was matched against Stewart Kenyon of Miami.

Wood, who played his first and second round matches yesterday, defeated Larry Larson of Peoria, Ill., 6-0, 6-1, and George Gallet of Miami, 6-4, 6-3, while Bell downed George Andradi of New York, 6-3, 6-1.

HI INTRAMURAL PLAY RESUMED

Junior, Suburban Leagues See Action On High School Floor

Vacations proved too strenuous for the high school intramural basketballers who got down to business once again in the three leagues Monday night on the high school hardwood. The boys put forth efforts that were not up to par.

In the Suburban league the Sinkers, paced by Allen, defeated the Tigers, 32-17.

The Junior league reopened activities with the Celtics soundly trouncing the Panthers, 20-18. Rogers with 16, and Merina with 13, led the winners, while Painter garnered eight points for the losing Panthers.

The Slowpokes came back strong in the second half in winning over the classy Ramblers, 26-17. The Ramblers led at half-time by a 14-12 score. The Aces, inspired by the sharp-shooting of Stewart and Rice, overpowered the Maroons, 29-18.

In the Senior league games were played, but the teams are being reorganized because of transfer of players to the "B" league. The new teams will be formed on Wednesday afternoon and the games previously played will not count in the standings. The present schedule will be strictly adhered to.

Tennis Stars Look Ahead To The Davis Cup

WILMER ALLISON—VETERAN NO. 1 SINGLES ACE

GENE MAKO—LOS ANGELES NET SENSATION

SID WOOD—N.Y. NET STYLIST—MAY YET REACH THE PEAK

Frankie PARKER—MERCER BEASLEY MAY NOT LET HIM PLAY ON THE DAVIS CUP TEAM THIS YEAR

America's Davis Cup prospects were probably never darker than at present, but even so, there are plenty of incurable optimists who profess to detect a few rays of light in the gloom.

With Lot, Stoefer, and Vines carrying in the professional ranks, the Davis Cup committee must choose their 1935 line-up from among Wilmer Allison, Gene Mako, Donald Budge, Frankie Parker and Sidney Wood, and it now seems that Parker won't be available, as his coach, Mercer Beasley, doesn't want to rush the youngster.

Of course, the optimists will point out that Allison came within an ace of beating the great Perry last fall at Forest Hills, and Gene Mako whipped the English mainstay in straight sets at Los Angeles before Perry left for Australia.

Then, too, the supposedly invincible Britisher has been taking a lot of bad licking from such players as Crawford, McGrath, Bousus and Quist in his matches Down Under.

From this, it might be thought that Perry is slipping, but those that know the present world's champion will tell you that Fred doesn't beat down in these unimportant matches. Best assured, the British ace will be at his peevish best when the Davis Cup challenge round takes place.

Meanwhile, the veteran Wilmer Allison is in a nice spot. He is rated our No. 1 singles player at present, and is in a position to dictate to the tennis bigwigs who humiliated Wilmer last summer by sending him on that famous wild goose chase to Europe. The lantern-jawed Texan is in the driver's seat now, and it is the tennis papas' to cry for mercy.

However, it is with Mako, Budge and Parker that America's future Davis Cup hopes seem to rest. These youngsters should reach their ascendancy in about three years, and then it may be our turn.

CLASS B FRAYS ARE EXCITING

Saxons Edge Out Methodists; Trade Class Beats Pottery

The Saxons and the Methodists provided exciting basketball entertainment at the Memorial building when the two teams clashed in Class B league frays, the Saxons winning by one point, 40 to 39. The Methodists set a slight lead at the start but before the half the Saxons held a two-point advantage.

Schneider, forward, set the pace for the winners with 11 points, while Wiggers, Methodist center, led his team with a total of 16 points.

Another game equally played was that between the Pottery five and the Trade Class cagers, which the latter won, 36 to 31. The Trade Class, with Stratton flashing with 13 points, trailed 10-5 at the end of the first stanza, but shot forward and held the Pottery scoreless in the next quarter.

DOWAGER QUEEN PEACE MAKER

Queen Marie Tries to Induce King Carol to Jilt Mme. Lupescu

(By Associated Press)

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 8.—Rumanian peasants rejoiced today at Queen Mother Marie's return to Rumania, aware that she is pursuing a skilful campaign to erase a "scandal" touching the royal house. Confidence was expressed in many quarters that the dowager queen would yet succeed in inducing her son, King Carol, to jilt Mme. Magda Lupescu, Carol's red-haired companion, and re-marry Princess Helen, from whom he is divorced.

The queen mother's popularity was increased by her voluntary return from Yugoslavia, where she had been living in almost complete seclusion with her daughter, Queen Marie, widowed by the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

Diplomatic circles believe Marie "swallowed her pride" to return to the capital where Mme. Lupescu has attained the station of "uncrowned queen."

Marie, Carol Together

In recent weeks Mme. Lupescu has become active socially, and is more conspicuous in Rumanian life than ever. Marie has never consented to meet her.

Marie and Carol, apparently amiable, attended a military festival a few days ago.

The queen mother, it was reported, is preparing the way for a family council in a few weeks at which an effort will be made to ease Mme. Lupescu from Carol's heart and life. The king's favorite sister, Queen Marie of Yugoslavia, and Prince Paul, head of the Yugoslav regency, it was reported, will aid the queen mother.

Despite all Queen Marie's previous entreaties to her son-king to renounce Mme. Lupescu and either return to Helen or wed a royal princess, so as to provide Rumania with a real reigning queen, the King has refused to give her up.

Romance, Drama and Mystery In Double Feature Bill At State

AN entertaining bill is scheduled at the State theater Wednesday and Thursday with the showing of "Lady By Choice" featuring Carole Lombard, May Robson and Roger Pryor and "Murder in the Clouds" with Lyle Talbot and Ann Dvorak in leading roles.

The first picture boasts an excellent cast for besides Miss Lombard, Miss Robson and Pryor there are Walter Connolly, Arthur Hohl, Raymond Walburn, Henry Kolker and James Burke. Here is a picture with humor, drama and a deep appeal plus a thrilling romance. It is splendidly enacted by its grand cast. It tells the story of two women, Alabam, a publicity seeking fan dancer and Patsy Patterson, an old derelict of the streets. Alabam's press agent has her arrested for doing a dance. The result is what they want—rears of front page publicity.

May Robson Scores Again

As another publicity stunt Alabam adopts a "mother" from an old ladies home. The mother happens to be Patsy who has been sent to the home by a kindly judge. Once installed in the apartment of the dancer Patsy refuses to leave. She begins to interfere in Alabam's business and love affairs, gradually assuming charge of both. She happens to love the girl and she believes the way to prove it to her is not to let Alabam make the mistake she (Patsy) did. When the older woman fails to make a stage star out of Alabam and their funds are gone the dancer declares she will try her own way. She seeks out a rich young man whom she intends to marry for his money. Then she discovers she really loves him and breaks her engagement.

How Patsy brings the pair together again, after many many difficulties, furnishes the climax to the story.

Mystery Thriller

THE second feature is a murder thriller entitled "Murder in the Clouds" written by Roy Chanslor and Dore Schary. It is a fast paced, breath taking film with plenty of thrills. It evolves about the secret attempt of international spies to steal the formula from the U. S. government of a new high explosive and for which they will commit any crime.

The blowing up of an airplane with its passengers and crew far up above the clouds and the subsequent chase after the air robbers and murderers by army planes, involving machine gun battles, the shooting down of airships, thrilling parachute jumps from burning and falling ships, add to the intensity of the dramatic situations.

TONIGHT that very human and understanding film, "Bright Eyes" which stars America's darling, Shirley Temple ends its three day at a transcontinental hanger is her "daddy" of the film, Jimmy Dunn. Others in the cast are Jane Withers, Jane Darwell, Judith Allen, Lois Wilson and Charles Selton.

VOTING LIGHT IN SAAR BASIN

Many Public Employees
Fail To Exercise
Their Franchise

(By Associated Press)

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 8.—A much lighter vote than had been anticipated was apparent today as public employees expressed their conviction as to whether the Saar should join Nazi Germany, remain under Geneva, or unite with France.

Fear of reprisals after the future of the Saar is determined in Sunday's plebiscite, kept hundreds of civil servants from the polls in a two-day preliminary vote. Since most of the 10,000 employees will be at work Sunday, they were allowed to vote early.

Many failed to exercise their franchise, it was disclosed, afraid of punishment later either by Nazis or those opposed to a reunion with the Reich.

Another factor which cut down the balloting sharply was the disqualification of many Nazis for shouting "Heil Hitler" at the voting places. Such demonstrations had been strictly forbidden.

DAVEY'S READY TO GO TO WORK

Notified by Assembly
After Tumultuous
Session

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—Somewhat subdued after one of the most tumultuous opening days in the history of Ohio legislatures, the 91st general assembly proceeded today to notify Martin L. Davey he has been elected governor.

The new Democratic chief executive then will be sworn in next Monday to find his cohorts in the rider's seat in both the senate and house, despite their minority in the lower branch.

Will Canvass Vote

The new legislature's task today was to canvass the vote cast in November and announced who was in the state government.

While Davey has made many preparations for formally taking over Gov. George White's job next Tuesday, including the appointment of several cabinet members, it remained for the legislature to inform him that the more than 60,000 majority he polled over Clarence E. Brown, the Republican candidate, is official.

The turn of events which has them knocked out of the speaker-ship, despite their 68 to 67 margin in the house, left perhaps a trace of bitterness in the Republican ranks today.

While victory in the senate was conceded the Democrats because of their 19 to 13 majority there, the Davey forces were handed the scepter in the house by two insurgent Republicans.

Rep. J. Freer Bittinger (D.) of Ashland was elected speaker, 69 to 66, when Reps. E. R. King of Vinton county and Edmond H. Diebel of Medina county "boiled" to the Democratic side.

King and Diebel said they voted against Arthur Hamilton of Lebanon, the Republican candidate, because his nomination had been dictated by "selfish interests."

G. O. P. Resentful

Then while the Republicans sat back in resentment and declined to participate in the next roll call, the Democrats elected Rep. Frank R. Uible of Cuyahoga county as speaker pro-tem without opposition.

DAVEY HUNTING TWO NEW AIDS

Jobs As Liquor Director,
Bank Superintendent
Still Open

On the state tax situation the governor elect said:

"I plan to see what results are forthcoming from the present taxes. If they are not satisfactory, I will then make some recommendations."

Scobell, the present state liquor department head, was appointed by Governor White several weeks ago when Director John A. Hughes resigned.

Scobell has declared he would not continue in the office unless Governor-elect Davey specifically requested him to or indicated his continuance would be desirable.

Mr. Davey said he would "do everything possible" to have his way in the appointment of George Eppley of Cleveland as director of public works.

Governor White recently re-appointed T. S. Brindle of Ashland to the directorship after the governor-elect had announced his intention of giving up the job to Eppley.

Answering rumors that Ayers might be asked to accept the appointment as director of commerce, in the event Alfred Benesch's health makes it impossible for him to take the position, Mr. Davey said:

"Mr. Ayers has indicated to me that to accept any appointment would be too great a financial sacrifice to him. In view of that fact, I will not offer him another appointment."

The governor-elect returned to Kent today to participate in a homecoming ceremony there.

MEXICO CHURCH WAR IS ACUTE

Five Shot As Crowd Of
1,500 Attack Red
Shirts' Office

(By Associated Press)

MEXICO, D. F., Jan. 8.—Mexico's bitter church-state conflict grew graver today after five persons were shot during a demonstration against the radical Red Shirt organization and the church openly defied the government's scholastic education program.

A crowd estimated at 1,500, most of them students, attacked the headquarters of the Red Shirts youth group, sworn enemies of the church, and five fell before the defenders' fire. The demonstrators smashed windows and tore down the Red Shirts' flag. Twenty-two persons received minor injuries.

The students gathered to demand the resignation of Tomas Garrido A. Canabal, founder of the Red Shirts and federal secretary of agriculture, whom they charged with responsibility for the slaying of five Catholics when they emerged from worship in suburban Coyacan two Sundays ago.

Fifty Red Shirts are in the penitentiary, charged with the killings. A wall of soldiers protected the presidential palace from a possible attack when the students marched there, shouting "death to Garrido," police forced them to disperse.
